

CFPB announces symposium on abusive acts or practices

June 11th, 2019

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) announced today that it will hold the first in its symposia series on June 25 from 9:00 am – 12:00 pm at their headquarters, 1700 G St. NW, Washington, DC. This event will focus on the Dodd-Frank Act’s prohibition on abusive acts or practices.

The agenda features remarks from CFPB Director Kathleen Kraninger and Deputy Director Brian Johnson, as well as two panels of UDAAP legal professionals and leading academic experts. Hudson Cook partner Lucy Morris – a former CFPB Deputy Enforcement Director – will participate on the second panel, moderated by David Bleicken, CFPB Deputy Associate Director, Supervision, Enforcement and Fair Lending.

The symposium will be live streamed on the CFPB’s website. Click here for more information.
