

Compliance Coffee Break: The Facebook, Inc. v. Duguid Supreme Court decision – What it means for TCPA private actions and companies using automated equipment for calls and texts

May 11th, 2021 | and Michael A. Goodman

Michael A. Goodman

Request a replay of this webinar

On April 1, 2021, the U.S. Supreme Court announced its decision in Facebook, Inc. v. Duguid, adopting a narrow “autodialer” standard under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA). In siding with Facebook, the Supreme Court sets a precedent that should drastically reduce the volume of TCPA autodialer litigation and help to protect financial institutions from new suits being filed against them. Join Michael Goodman as he explains what the ruling means for the industry, as well as what questions may still be left unanswered.

Registration required. All fields with an asterisk (*) are required. Registration is offered and available primarily to clients of Hudson Cook, LLP. Please register using a company email address. Attempted registrations using personal email (Gmail, Yahoo, etc.) or academic email addresses (.edu) will not be accepted or will be canceled prior to the date of the webinar, as will registrations from lawyers at law firms, government employees or reporters. After registering and being approved, registrants will receive a confirmation email containing instructions on how to log in to the webinar.

Hudson Cook, LLP provides articles, webinars and other content on its website from time to time provided both by attorneys with Hudson Cook, LLP, and by other outside authors, for information purposes only. Hudson Cook, LLP does not warrant the accuracy or completeness of the content, and has no duty to correct or update information contained on its website. The views and opinions contained in the content provided on the Hudson Cook, LLP website do not constitute the views and opinion of the firm. Such content does not constitute legal advice from such authors or from Hudson Cook, LLP. For legal advice on a matter, one should seek the advice of counsel.