

FTC adopts process reforms to streamline investigations and improve transparency. Hudson Cook partner plays key role in encouraging reforms.

August 10th, 2017

This summer, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) Acting Chairman Maureen K. Ohlhausen announced several internal process reforms in the agency's Bureau of Consumer Protection intended to streamline information requests, improve transparency in Commission investigations, and eliminate unnecessary burdens on businesses. Joel Winston, a partner with the law firm of Hudson Cook in Washington, D.C., was a member of the 2016 Presidential Transition Task Force, which issued a January 2017 report that served as a catalyst for the FTC's current reform initiatives.

Hudson Cook, LLP provides articles, webinars and other content on its website from time to time provided both by attorneys with Hudson Cook, LLP, and by other outside authors, for information purposes only. Hudson Cook, LLP does not warrant the accuracy or completeness of the content, and has no duty to correct or update information contained on its website. The views and opinions contained in the content provided on the Hudson Cook, LLP website do not constitute the views and opinion of the firm. Such content does not constitute legal advice from such authors or from Hudson Cook, LLP. For legal advice on a matter, one should seek the advice of counsel.