

Partner Allen Denson comments on Fifth Circuit CFPB rejection of CID

September 11th, 2018

On September 7, Law360 reported that the U.S. Court of Appeals Fifth Circuit's rejected of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's (CFPB) petition to enforce its Civil Investigative Demand (CID) to Texas-based public records search company, The Source for Public Data. This was only the second time that an appeals court has declined to enforce the CFPB's CID. Partner Allen Denson called this a "significant decision," noting that the decision may offer some ammunition to other companies that are trying to get CIDs set aside. Allen and Partner Becki Kuehn wrote the amicus brief filed by the National Association of Background Screeners in support of Public Data.

Allen represents clients before the CFPB, FTC, DOJ, federal prudential regulators, as well as state attorneys general and financial regulatory agencies. Attorneys in Hudson Cook's Government Investigations, Examinations and Enforcement practice area provide experienced support to consumer financial services companies and others facing government scrutiny.

Subscribers to Law360 may read the article here. You may also read Allen's summary of the decision in the Hudson Cook article found here.

Hudson Cook, LLP provides articles, webinars and other content on its website from time to time provided both by attorneys with Hudson Cook, LLP, and by other outside authors, for information purposes only. Hudson Cook, LLP does not warrant the accuracy or completeness of the content, and has no duty to correct or update information contained on its website. The views and opinions contained in the content provided on the Hudson Cook, LLP website do not constitute the views and opinion of the firm. Such content does not constitute legal advice from such authors or from Hudson Cook, LLP. For legal advice on a matter, one should seek the advice of counsel.