

Partner Eric Johnson Debunks CFPB Death Rumors

September 12th, 2018

In the September/October issue of Non-Prime Times, the official publication of the National Automotive Finance Association, Partner Eric Johnson explains why the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, now re-born as the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection (“Bureau”), is still very much alive and kicking. Eric outlines the Bureau’s recent actions, including at least six new enforcement actions since April, subpoenas and CIDs being issued, ongoing investigations and new examinations being scheduled. Additionally, he points out that state attorneys general across the country are getting even more aggressive about prosecuting cases in which financial fraud or discrimination are suspected, with some states creating “mini-CFPBs” and looking at passing CFPB-like legislation that will pick up where federal laws may be lacking.

Read Eric’s article here. Visit NAF to subscribe for free to the newsletters.

Hudson Cook, LLP provides articles, webinars and other content on its website from time to time provided both by attorneys with Hudson Cook, LLP, and by other outside authors, for information purposes only. Hudson Cook, LLP does not warrant the accuracy or completeness of the content, and has no duty to correct or update information contained on its website. The views and opinions contained in the content provided on the Hudson Cook, LLP website do not constitute the views and opinion of the firm. Such content does not constitute legal advice from such authors or from Hudson Cook, LLP. For legal advice on a matter, one should seek the advice of counsel.