

Partner Lucy Morris quoted in Bloomberg Law article on expected CFPB enforcement changes for 2020

December 26th, 2019

Bloomberg Law recently published an article outlining three enforcement changes that Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) Director Kathleen Kraninger is expected to make in 2020: termination of consent orders, defining “abusive” act or practices in enforcement actions, and bringing in an enforcement director from outside the agency. According to the article, the changes are unlikely to bring much of a shift in priorities for the Trump-era CFPB, but they will make the Bureau more of a reflection of Kraninger’s style.

Hudson Cook Partner Lucy Morris, a former Deputy Enforcement Director at the CFPB, commented for Bloomberg.

“It’s somewhat consistent with her trying to be more transparent with how the bureau does things in the enforcement arena,” said Lucy.

Lucy is a partner in the firm’s Washington, DC office and chairs the firm’s Government Investigations, Examinations, and Enforcement Practice Group. She counsels financial institutions and others in complying with federal consumer financial laws and prohibitions against unfair, deceptive, or abusive trade practices. She is an experienced advocate and litigator, representing clients in government investigations, examinations, and enforcement actions before federal and state agencies, including the CFPB, FTC, U.S. Department of Justice and state AG offices.

Click here to read the article (subscription may be required).

Hudson Cook, LLP provides articles, webinars and other content on its website from time to time provided both by attorneys with Hudson Cook, LLP, and by other outside authors, for information purposes only. Hudson Cook, LLP does not warrant the accuracy or completeness of the content, and has no duty to correct or update information contained on its website. The views and opinions contained in the content provided on the Hudson Cook, LLP website do not constitute the views and opinion of the firm. Such content does not constitute legal advice from such authors or from Hudson Cook, LLP. For legal advice on a matter, one should seek the advice of counsel.